The Value of Course Planning

- Creates a “mindset” for identifying and presenting outcomes and using new methods.
- Promotes the development of broad and inclusive teaching routines that respond to academic diversity.
- Communicates coursewide expectations about how content, learning, and social interactions will be organized during the first weeks of a course.
- Defines how the learning community will be created and maintained.

The Challenge of Course Planning

Many students have difficulty:

- Seeing their own progress.
- Understanding why learning information is important.
- Learning how the teacher approaches the course.
- Feeling comfortable with learning rituals.
- Learning how to participate in creating a good classroom learning climate.
- Learning the performance standards for course expectations.
- Understanding how course ideas are related to units and lessons.
- Creating new ways to organize and categorize information over time.
- Learning how to integrate and generalize what they have learned.

Research on Course Planning

When teachers use a Course Organizer Routine:

- Teachers spend more time orienting students to a course.
- Teachers use more methods related to inclusive teaching.
- Students considered at-risk for school failure answered more course content questions correctly.
- All students either improved or maintained steady progress.
- Teachers reported that it provided focus for unit and lesson planning.

Components of Course Planning

- The questions that capture critical content
- A map that shows the sequence of course units
- The underlying concepts that will serve as the basis for the course questions and units
- The course rituals (comprised of teaching routines & learning strategies)
- The principles used to create a learning community
- The standards used to evaluate student progress
- The systems used to promote communication and progress toward expectations
- A concrete device for communicating planning decisions
- A routine for launching & maintaining course goals and progress

Course Organizer Routine

- CUE A visual device called the COURSE ORGANIZER is presented & explained at the beginning of the course.
- Throughout the course, the teacher cues students to use the Course Organizer to evaluate progress and integrate learning.
- DO During the initial presentation, the teacher follows a set of procedures called the LINKING STEPS that help the teacher explain how the Course Organizer will enhance learning.
- At the end of each unit, the teacher explicitly guides students in how to use the Course Organizer to understand the “big ideas” of the course.
- REVIEW The teacher uses the Course Organizer throughout the year and at the end of the year to help students review what and how learning has occurred.

Guidebooks in the Content Enhancement Series

Routines to help students organize and frame information and tasks:

- The Course Organizer Routine

- The Unit Organizer Routine
- The Survey Routine
- The Lesson Organizer Routine
- The Framing Routine

Routines to help students understand ideas:

- The Concept Master Routine
- The Concept Anchoring Routine
- The Concept Comparison Routine
- The Clarifying Routine

Routines to help students remember & respond:

- The Recall Enhancement Routine
- The Quality Assignment Routine

The Course Questions

- Serve as the basis for many conversations with students.
- Include expectations related to HOW to learn or demonstrate competence.
- Identify ways in which students should think about information to be learned.
- Lead students to do well on outcome measures.
- Enable students to monitor progress in learning.
- Help students identify the critical concepts or ideas to be shared.
- Help students think about the context and how it fits into other contexts.
- Help students organize information that supports the critical concepts or ideas to be learned.
- Use words like “how” and “why” to form broad questions (not objectives or commands).

1. Ideas of America

2. The First Americans

3. Explorat

10. Visions for America

9. The Gilded Age

8. Division and Reunion

Learning Rituals

Must always:

- Consist of a set of concrete steps that define how something important related to learning is done;
- Be known, taught, or learned by each member of the group;
- Be performed in relatively the same way each time it is performed;
- Focus on how teaching, learning, and connecting to others guide learning.

Can be:

- Teaching routines.
- Learning strategies.
- Social skills strategies.
- Communication systems.

Performance Options

Alternatives or accommodations that allow students to meet the academic demands of:

- acquiring information,
- storing and retrieving information, &
- expressing and demonstrating competence.

Examples:

- extended work time
- peer readers/tutors
- copies of presentation notes
- presenting assignments orally and in writing
- study partners/peer study teams
- audiotaped responding
- spelling checkers

Launching the Course

- Develop draft of Course Organizer.
- Distribute blank Course Organizer to students.
- Describe the parts of the Course Organizer, its purpose in the course, and how it will be used.
- Follow these Linking Steps to help students complete a draft of the Course Organizer:

Cue Course Questions.

Outline Critical Concepts and Units.

Uncover Community Principles.

Reveal Learning Rituals.

Share Performance Options.

Explain Course Standards.

Maintaining the Course

- As each unit is launched, review course questions. Discuss which ones have been answered and which ones still need to be answered.
- Review the course map. Discuss where previous, current, and future units fit within the course.
- Chart and discuss performance in the previous unit for the group. Give students their scores and help plot their progress.
- Discuss the climate of the learning community and how well students are using classroom rituals.

Closing the Course

- Present a synthesis experience or assignment.
- Review course performance using Unit Organizers and the Course Organizer.
- Discuss the value of the course questions and related work.
- Discuss the relationship of this course to other courses.
- Discuss the quality of the learning community and how it could be improved for future courses.
- Discuss ideas and options for “What is next?”
